ACTIVITY: Dimensions of Me

This activity highlights the multiple dimensions of our identities. It addresses the importance of individuals self-defining their identities and challenging stereotypes.

• Place your name in the center circle of the structure.
• Write an important aspect of your identity in each of the satellite circles -- an identifier or descriptor that you feel is important in defining you. This can include anything: Asian American, female, mother, athlete, educator, Taoist, scientist, or any descriptor with which you identify.
Dimensions of Me
Let’s Talk About It – In Teams of Two

1. Share a story about a time you were especially proud to identify yourself with one of the descriptors you used.

2. Share a story about a time it was especially painful to be identified with one of your identifiers or descriptors.
In the first image, it is assumed that everyone will benefit from the same supports. They are being treated equally.

In the second image, individuals are given different supports to make it possible for them to have equal access to the game. They are being treated equitably.

In the third image, all three can see the game without any supports or accommodations because the cause of the inequity was addressed. The systemic barrier has been removed.
We make a lot of assumptions.
We all practice....

Similarity bias.

We like to be around people who are like us.
As a result, we often:

- Stereotype
- Discriminate
- Ignore
- Deny
- Hurt others
- Miss out
Implicit bias is... attitudes or stereotypes that affect our understanding, actions, and decisions in an unconscious manner.

A Few Key Characteristics of Implicit Biases

- Implicit biases are pervasive.
  - Everyone possesses them, even people with avowed commitments to impartiality such as judges.

- Implicit and explicit biases are related but distinct mental constructs. They are not mutually exclusive and may even reinforce each other.

- The implicit associations we hold do not necessarily align with our declared beliefs or even reflect stances we would explicitly endorse.

- We generally tend to hold implicit biases that favor our own ingroup, though research has shown that we can still hold implicit biases against our ingroup.

- Implicit biases are malleable.
  - Our brains are incredibly complex, and the implicit associations that we have formed can be gradually unlearned through a variety of debiasing techniques.
Implicit bias, in our decision making... can change the course of a client or colleague’s life!

It's our parents and the media's fault!

- What exists in our subconscious causes us to have feelings and attitudes about people based on characteristics such as race, ethnicity, age, and appearance.
- These biases are developed over the course of a lifetime beginning at a very early age through exposure to direct and indirect messages.
- In addition to early life experiences, the media and news programming are often-cited origins of implicit associations.

Bias is informed and enforced by the environment that you are in.
In an effort to find a solution to implicit bias, researchers found “people must be aware of their biases and concerned about the consequences before they will exert effort to eliminate them.”

- Raise Awareness
  - Speakers, Book Club, etc.
- Allow Sufficient Time for Decision Making
  - Unconscious bias emerges when evaluators are under time pressure
- Consider Cultural Differences
  - American standards of self-confidence, enthusiasm, and leadership do not always translate across cultures

Team Action Planning

In your organizational teams or groups, you will spend 20 mins answering the following questions:

- Where is my/our organization on our journey?
- Where do we desire to be?
- What resources/information do we need to begin/continue?
- What is standing in our way?
DO NOW, DO NEXT.....

Based upon what you have experienced today, what action can YOU take right NOW?

As a team or collaboratively, what based upon today’s dialogue will you do NEXT to advance your organization on its DEI journey?
Caterpillar and the Snail...
Thank you
